I do have one last question for you. When I called you on May 7th 2003 and told you that I was thinking about flying over to Vienna myself to help resolve the inheritance issue for you, did you already know that you would be flying to Vienna yourself in the next several days, specifically on the weekend of May 10th 2003, and decide not to share that piece of information with me? Or did my call to you on May 7th panic you so much that you decided to get on a plane ASAP after my call to make sure that you got to Vienna and settled the issue before your sister might create any "problems" for you?

But, you want me to believe that you, as you say "involved you (Sylvia) in the whole process of the late Franz L. Gettinger which are not the actions of someone who is dishonest." How exactly do you figure you involved me in the "whole process" when you kept that important fact all to yourself, and to this day have never come clean with me? I had to learn that information from someone else (and it wasn't our mother!) and that behavior on your part, my dear brother, started me thinking about your trustworthiness and true motivations. I waited patiently for months for you to be honest with me and tell me about the trip yourself. But, you never did. Try as I may, I just can't come up with a legitimate "honest" excuse for why you didn't share with me your plans to fly to Vienna yourself on May 10th, when I spoke with you just days earlier about the issue. Please don't insult my intelligence by claiming you "just forgot" or you thought I "wouldn't care". I don't appreciate being "played" by you.

An honest person with nothing to hide and who as you say really was involving someone in the "whole process" would have either 1.) let me know what the plans were, and or 2.) when I called three days before the flight, said "oh, by the way I am flying to Vienna myself this weekend". Not, your response to me which was "do what you have to do" and not one word about your flight plans that coming weekend. It has become abundantly clear to me that you just involved me at the beginning to use me for your own benefit and gain. You wanted to know if I would be willing to help you "double-cross" your stepmother, Millie and if you could count on me not to make any "problems" for you and make it easier for you to claim your inheritance. But, you call yourself "the good brother". In my book, right now you are a "user of people". If someone can't help you, you aren't interested in speaking with them. Everything is about "Robert" and no one else counts.

I hope that you are at least a better husband than you are "a brother" or for that matter "a son". Don't worry, I don't expect an answer from you. Why should you answer? You don't give a shit about anyone except yourself.
